Sounding the death knell of the dainty hobble skirt, dashing young schoolgirls and silver-haired matrons with a great clatter and fluttering went into raptures of delight when they feasted their "harem" skirt, the latest wrinkle in feminine apparel, at the opening of the National Style Show at the

Arlington Hotel last night Group by group they made way to the stall, where a dainty young woman was garbed in the plum-colored creation, the

Good for Windy Day.

The skirt is cut something on the order of ordinary trousers, and fits snugly over the hips. It strikes below the ankles a trifle, and is recommended for rainy or stormy days, as it is almost impossible for a vagrant wind to switch it sky-A single charming motion will lift it beyond the contammination of mud, and when this was done, on the model at least, only the tiniest bit of ankle was displayed to the admirers of the garment. Washington came in droves to witness the profusion of the very latest kinds and classes of apparel for men and women. Coats and overcoats, evening gowns, riding habits, and furs of the most costly, are there in abundance, all the work of designers of note. The crowds represented all classes of society.

The beautifully decorated hall, lined on both sides with exhibits, reminded one of Men and women paced up and down to the strains of music by Bovello's orchestra, and enjoyed themselves hugely, at the same time getting ideas on what's what in

Robert Pluym displays on live models his new safety riding skirt. It is extremely simple in design, and, having no pockets to catch in the horn of the saddle, is considered absolutely safe, and in comfort far beyond the old-fashioned garment. A beautifully embroidered dress of an 1838 model of Alice blue, a color Apparel at Elaborate Exhibit-Dia- originated by Pluym, was admired by dozens of women. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth's eyes were responsible for this shade of blue, for the reason that Pluym was called upon to match them when he designed a dress for her. The shade attracted attention all over Europe and became immensely popular. Another riding costume by Pluym is composed of ordinary breeches and a long coat, just knee length, with riding boots.

Paul Liebel has on exhibition two stunning coat suits of original and striking design, which found immediate favor. Edward Lipshutz had only one coat suit, gray English homespun, on exhibition, but for beauty of design, it was much mmented upon.

Three live models showing Peter Pan suits for young women, designed by Miss M. E. Hodgkins, made a hit, especially

ORCHESTRA SCORES PRONOUNCED HIT

Excellent Programme Given at Columbia Theater.

The Washington Symphony Orchestra, Heinrich Hammer, conductor, and Paul Bleyden, tenor soloist, gave an excellent concert yesterday afternoon in Columbia Theater. Their programme 'ncluded the Mozart symphony in E flat, which they played exceedingly well, with good attack and shading and a seriousness of the work. The real gems were the symphonic sketches of Chaddid harmonies.

Mr. Bleyden showed himself to be one and timbre, and is a treat because of with orchestral accompaniment. sang a charming ballad, with piano accompaniment by Miss Alice Burbage, any city might well feel proud. The next concert will be given March 14, with the concert-master, Her-man Rakemann, as soloist.
